AN ELECTRIC RAILROAD In the North of Ireland—Interesting D scription of the Plan of Operation.

In our last issue we recorded, at great ength, the various movements of their Es cellencies, the Earl and Countess Spencer. from the hour they left Dublin on the pre eding Saturday, till the following Friday afternoon, when they arrived at Bushmills, naving traveled the distance from Portrush by the electric car without a bitch. Here they alighted, and accompanied by a se ect party, they were driven to the Walknill, on the river Bush, where the turbine mill, on the river Bush, where the turbine wheels, which supply the molive power for the production of the electric fluid, are situated. On his arrival, his Excellency minutely inspected the various works, and showed a deep interest in the different scientific appliances, which were fully explained to him by Dr. Hopkinson, electrical engineer to Sir William Siemens, and Mr. William A. Traill, the resident engineer. Earl Spencer expressed himself nightly delighted with everything he had seen, and warmly congratulated the engineers on the successful realization of their marvelous enterprise.

When, in the month of May last, we had occasion to refer to the electric railway, it ecession to refer to the electric railway, it ad only reached as far as Dunlace Costle at that time, on the invitation of the en-At that time, on the invitation of the engineer, a number of gentlemen representing various organs of public opinion, were present to winness a private trial of the electric cars, the line up to that period having been worked by steam power exclusively. The result of the trial being all that the promoters could desire, it was only reasonable to expect that no time would be lost in extending the line to Bashmills. This extension has now been completed, the entire length of the system being six miles. In connection with the passenger the entire length of the system being six miles. In connection with the passenger traffic, which entails seven trips each way daily, there is an efficient car service from Bushmills to the Giant's Causeway. At the latter place the hotel has been pur-chased by the company, and, baving been renovated and otherwise improved, is now a very desirable resort for tourists.

UTILIZING THE STATES POWER. An important change has also taken lace in the method of generating the place in the method of generating the electricity for the permanent working of the line. Hitherto a stationary engine was used for this purpose in the depot at Portrush. From this point the motive power was supplied by one of Siemen's dynamos, and the service throughout the aummer months was conducted with the dynamos, and the service throughout the summer months war conducted with the greatest regularity and without the slightest hitch taking place. With a view, however, to the reduction of the working expenses, the engineer, with admirable lact, has so employed the water power which the district affords that steam will no longer be required, and for the future the electricity required for the working of the line will be generated by the natural agency above referred to. The works necessary for this purpose have been erected at that part of the River Bush known as the Salmon Leap. At this place, which is about half a mile from the public road along which the line runs, there is at all seasons a great volume of water, which flows at sufficient rapidity to form a sort of cataract. The site of the new works is at the head of these rapids. By an artificial channel springing from the bed of the river the water is conveyed in a direction parallel with the stream for a considerable distance, finally falling through a wide metal "shooting" from a height of about thirty feet.

thirty feet. GENERATING THE ELECTRICITY. At the base of this "shooting" there are we powerful turbine wheels built to order v. Alcott, of New York. The revolution if the water wheels turns a massive upright haft, which in turn communicates with a ide shaft connected with a fly-wheel attached to a dynamic in the generating shed a most satisfactory manner, and reflect much credit not only to Mr. Traili and his assistant, (Mr. Price), but on the contrac-tors. The way in which the electric cur-rent is utilized may be briefly explained. It is communicated in the manner described from the generating shed to the conducting from the generating shed to the conducting rail, which runs parallel with the line, and is supported on wooden pillars about two feet from the ground. Projecting from the side of each carriage are two flexible steel brushes resting on this rail, and by means of these brushes the current is transmitted to two couple of commutators placed in invisible compartments beneath the carriages. The electricity causes a cogwheel attached to each commutator to revolve, and a chain belt connecting the cogs with the axies communicates the motion to the wheels of the carriages.

NO TROUBLE WITH GRADES.

In this way, with no apparent propelling agency, and with no more noise than is caused by the contact of the brushes with the conducting roll, the electric carriages glide gracefully over the line, ascending stubborn gradients and coming down hill with the same regularity of motion that marks their progress on the mest level part of the track. As a result of the new works it is claimed that not only a larger number is of carriages can be run than was formerly the case, but that much greater economy of working will be obtained. The section of the line between the depot and the Northern Counties station is at present worked by steam; but it is the intention of the company in due course to continue the electrical system through the town. The machinery at Portrush, although at present not required, will be kept in reserve in case of accident to the works at Bushmills, or, if necessary, to supplement the eapacity of the latter place as a generating station during the summer excussion traffic. It is, however, scarcely probable that the steam-engine will ever be required for this purpose, as the supply of water always available will average ninety horse power. The carriages, both open and covered, are models of neatness and comfort, and the enjoyment of a trip over this novel line is greatly enhanced by the uniform courtesy of the conductors. I nabe stated that it is the intention of the company to continue to use steam power in connection with all goods traffic over the company to continue to use steam pow-er in connection with all goods traffic over

Influence of the Soil on Health.

The influence of the soil on the health of those living upon it, is brought out very plaintly during the prevalence of epidemic diseases. That maiarial diseases (like intermittent fevers) originate from the toil, is already accepted; and recent investigations show pretty conclusively that the germs of Cholera, Adominal Typhus, Yellow Fever, and the plague are in some way connected with the soil, which is daily corroborated by letters from all parts of the country, stating the marvelous effect Peruna has on those diseases, and in their convalescent state. John E. Courner, of Corry, Pa., says: "I am still getting better, thanks to your Peruna." See getting better, thanks to your Peruna." See getting better, thanks to your Peruna." See

The Weak and the Impure. The merry little mountain brook is it lightly dances over the rocks ind sparkles in the sunshine on its way down to the river, is pure and lean. It is active; therefore, it is healthy. It is vigorous; therefore, t resists impurity.

But the sluggish pool, where the current is not strong enough to keep the water in motion, is stagmant and foul. Dirt and rubbish are thrown nto it, and stay there. Impurities and vile odors make it a breeder of disease and an object to be avoided. When the blood is strong and rich and red, and vigorously courses its accustomed rounds through arteries and veins, the system is hearty and healthy.

When the blood is thin and poor and weak, impurities and defilements creep into it, and it has no strength
